Printed and Sold by JOHN D. McDUGALL and
COMPANY, two Doors South of the Treasurer's Office.

TO engage in public undertakings, with a laudable zeal for the advantage of mankind, is surely praiseworthy; but as few of ABRAHAM WEATHERWISE's Readers know who he is, neither where, nor how he lives; for their further satisfaction on that account, I'll venture to give the description of my Own Habitation: And if my Works are approved of this year, shall give a particular Account of my Life and Adventures in my next Year's Almanack.

Know ye then, my beloved Readers and Customers, that at this very time I live in a poor, little, sorry house of mud and clay*; the timber or chief support whereof, is much gone to decay, by reason of age, and very good judges give their opinion, that it cannot be repaired, chiefly owing to some damages formerly received by taking in too much Wet: But, be that as it will, it stands upon the waste, as other cottages do; and what is still worse, I am liable to be turned out at a minute's warning. It is on a sort of a lease; The custom, as now ordered by my Landlord, is this, and to which I have hitherto conformed: For the first thirty five years of my life I paid no rent, but only did suit and service, and attended the court occasionally; for twenty years after that I paid a rose every year; and after that, for the rest, residue and remainder of my mortal life, the custom (which you'll say is a whimsical kind of acknowledgment) is to demand a tooth every two or three years, or oftener if required; but (thanks to my good Landlord) I have not yet been called upon for such acknowledgment, how soon I may I know not; however, this I do know; that when I have nothing left to pay with, Out must be the word! and it will not be long before my person be seized.

I might have had my tenement (such an one as it is) upon much better terms, had it not been for a fault in my Great Grandfather and his Wife†, together with the ill advice of a bad Neighbour‡, who were all three concerned in robbing an orchard belonging to my Landlord, whereby they forfeited their grand privilege, to my sorrow, I am very sure: But, however, I must do as well as I can, and endeavour to keep things in as good repair as possible.

My kitchen, or the place where I dress my victuals, is a very comical, little, roundish sort of a room, somewhat resembling an oven; it well answers the business it was designed for, and that's enough.

Whenever I shall be turned out, I understand my lodge (or whatever else you please to call it) descends upon a low-spirited creeping family, remarkable for nothing but being instrumental in advancing the reputation of the Great Burying Ground near the Granary. But, be that as it will, I have one snug apartment, which I reserve for choice friends; it lies on the left side of my house: It is spacious, but very warm; and there any honest, sincere person will always be a welcome Guest, and may depend upon having a lodge, so long as the edifice shall remain in my tenure and occupation.

* His body. † Adam and Eve. ‡ The Devil.

I envy not the proud their wealth, their equipage and state,
 Give me but innocence and health, I ask not to be great.
 Tumultuous days and restless nights ambition ever knows,
 A stranger to the calm delights of study and repose.
 Then free from envy, care, and strife, permit me, heav'n-ly pow'rs,
 To pass a pure, unblemish'd life, and crown with peace my hours!

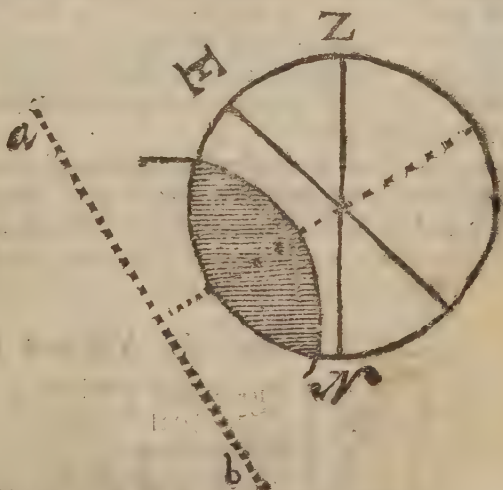

ABRAHAM WEATHERWISE.

The head and face the Ram doth always rule :
 The neck and throat are govern'd by the Bull.
 O'er the arms and shoulders still the Twins preside ;
 Breast, stomach, ribs, the crooked Crab doth guide.
 The noble Lion rules the back and heart :
 The bashful Virgin claims the belly part.
 The reins and loins the equal balance weigh :
 The Scorpion o'er the secret parts doth sway.
 The curious Archer doth the thighs affect :
 So doth the Goat our bended knees protect.
 The legs unto Aquarius' lot do fall :
 The Fish our active feet their portion call.

To know where the SIGN is.

ENDEAVOUR to be religious without superstition, just without rigour, merciful without partiality, cautious without fear, valiant without rashness, and great without pride.

To superiors give respect, deference and submission; to equals affection and confidence; to every body sincerity, and all the service in your power.

Be civil to all, serviceable to many, familiar with few, a friend to one, and an enemy to none.

It is not less cowardly to speak ill of the dead, than it would be to kill an enemy incapable of making his own defence.

Emulation is a noble passion; it is enterprising, but yet just; because it strives to excel, only by raising itself, and not by depressing another.

A wise man will desire no more than what he may get justly, use soberly, distribute cheerfully, and leave contentedly.

An uncultivated mind, like unmanured ground, will soon be over-run with weeds.

It is a pitiful sneaking sort of life, that of a backbiter, always to be pecking at, and feeding upon the imperfections of others.

Law and physic should only be made use of for necessity.

It is not so very difficult for men to know themselves, if they did but take the pains to enquire; but they are more solicitous to be thought what they should be, than really careful to be what they should.

None more impatiently suffer injuries than those that are most forward in doing them.

He that envieth, maketh another man's virtue his vice, and another's happiness his torment; whereas, he that rejoiceth at the prosperity of another, is partaker of the same.

Every condition of life has its disadvantages; and he only, who bears them with fortitude is victorious.

HIS EXCELLENCY
GEORGE WASHINGTON, Esq;
Commander in Chief of the Armies of the United States of America.

An EXTRACT from MURRAY's celebrated History of the present War.---He relates General Washington's triumphal entrance into Boston, after he had obliged the British to quit that Place, as follows :

“ UPON March 17th, 1776, as the rear of the British embarked, General Washington marched into the town of Boston with drums beating, colours flying, and in all the triumph of victory. And indeed it was a compleat victory for the present, seeing he had made troops that were reckoned invincible, abandon a town which they had fortified as well as they could, with all the precipitation that usually happens in signal defeats. The evacuation of Boston, which in the stile of the day was called only a change of position, was certainly a flight under as great apprehensions of fear and destruction as ever happened to any army. The marks of fear and hurry were visible in what they left behind them. They left a considerable quantity of artillery and stores upon Bunker-hill and Boston-neck, which they had not time to carry off, through hurry and fear; and though they attempted to render the cannon unserviceable, the hurry which then prevailed prevented that design.---They threw some mortars and cannon into the water, which were afterwards weighed by the people of the town. But all circumstances concur to shew what influence panic and dread had upon them in the embarkation.

“ When General Washington entered the town, he was received by the remaining inhabitants, and acknowledged by the refugees, who now recovered their ancient possession, with every mark of gratitude and respect that could be possibly shewn to a deliverer. The assembly of the province were not less zealous in their public acknowledgments. His answer was proper, modest, and becoming his situation.---He spoke like a man that did not pursue vain glory, but sought the welfare of his country, and maintained the natural rights of mankind. The policy of Britain had made him a rebel, but his country looked upon him as a saviour and deliverer.”

LET others, fame or wealth pursuing,
Despise a mean but safe retreat,
I'll ne'er contrive my own undoing,
Nor stoop so low as to be great.

The faithless Court, the tricking 'Change,
What solid pleasures can they give?
Oh! let me in the country range,
'Tis there we breath, 'tis there we live.

The beauteous scene of aged mountains,
Smiling valleys, murmuring fountains.
Lambs in flow'ry pastures bleating,
Echo our complaints repeating;
Bees with busy sounds delighting;
Groves to gentle sleep inviting;
Whispering winds the poplars courting;
Swains in rustic circles sporting;
Birds in cheerful notes expressing,
Nature's bounty, and their blessing;
These afford a lasting pleasure,
Without guilt, and without measure.

I like the fellow's whim:
For why? She horns him; so the jilt
Belongs but half to him.

On the BIRTH of our BLESSED SAVIOUR,

YE choir angelic, hail the glorious morn,
 In which a Saviour full of grace was born!
 Ye raptur'd Seraphs, hallelujahs sing;
 In choral symphonies, extol your King:
 All nature join to celebrate his fame,
 And the glad tidings to the earth proclaim.

Ye holy Prophets, who his birth foretold ;
 Your true predictions we with joy behold !
 Ye ministers of grace, perform his will ;
 In thought and deed his blessed word fulfil !
 The Saviour of the world was not array'd
 With majesty of pomp, and vain parade :
 In sweet humility he came attir'd ;
 In pity to our sins, with grief inspir'd.

Whose life and precepts were alike benign !
Shall thy disciples e'er in malice live ;
Obtain forgiveness, and yet not forgive ?
Ye worldlings, wiser than the sons of light,

The Day-spring from on high, with lustre bright,
 Now cheers the world with his effulgent light ;
 The saving health, and hope of human kind ;
 Sweet balm of comfort to the troubled mind !
 The heavy laden hence obtain due rest ;
 The meek are comforted, the mourner blest :
 And e'en the blind enlighten'd by his beams :
 The thirsty soul finds mild refreshing streams ;

The deaf attend, with love and wonder gaze;
 The dumb break forth to sing his mighty praise.
 At his approach pale miseries decrease;
 The bond of happiness and source of peace:
 A Lamb immaculate, tho' doom'd to bleed,
 Whose blood redeem'd us, and whose bondage freed.
 By zeal inspir'd, I meditate his praise,
 To highest pitch my feeble accents raise;

In founts seraphic may I catch the flame,
 Invoke my Saviour, and his pow'r proclaim.
 All hail Redeemer, hail Almighty King,
 To whom the mountains dance, the valleys sing!
 Thou great Messiah! we are nought but dust,
 Tho' heirs with thee, in kingdoms of the just.
 Celestial Pow'r, of righteousness the Sun!
 On earth, as 'tis in heav'n, thy will be done.

Kings of the earth shall bend the willing knee,
 And mighty potentates submit to thee.
 What is their pomp, and triumph of a day,
 To thy dominions which will ne'er decay?
 Their pow'r expires where thine did but begin;
 For 'twas by death thou vanquish'd pain and sin.
 Thou Shepherd of our souls, the holy rock
 On whom we rest, receive thy erring flock;

 And lose them in false bus'ness, sports or wine.
 But canst thou lose them? Seest thou not each hour
 Age drop like autumn-leaves? Youth like a flow'r
 Cut down? Do coffins, graves and tolling bells
 Warn thee in vain? In palaces and cells,

NOVEMBER 30 DAYS.

The heights of life above, the vales beneath,
 In towns and fields, we ev'ry where meet death.
 Dull trick! insipid! cries the critic's phlegm,
 "Mors omnibus communis."---Children's theme!---
 Thy children die, and critic, so must thou;---
 And so must I; tho' none knows when or how:
 Soon it must be, and that is all we know.

DECEMBER 31 DAYS.

THIS present year now weareth out;
 How soon twelve months are gone about!
 You've seen the days increase and waste,
 Spring, summer, autumn, now are past:
 So changeth man upon this stage,
 Erst in his youth; anon in age:
 Now young, then strong; in grief or mirth,
 Now here; anon bury'd in earth!

T H E R I B.

ADAM alone could not be easy,
So he must have a wife, an't please you :
But how did he procure his wife,
To cheer his solitary life ?

Why, from a rib cut off his side
Was form'd this necessary bride.
But how did he the pain beguile ?
Pho ! he slept sweetly all the while.

But when this rib was re-apply'd,
In woman's form to Adam's side,
How then, I pray you, did it answer ?
He never slept so sweet again, Sir.

T h e F E M A L E W I S H.

GRANT me, ye gods, a calm retreat,
Where I may pass my days,
Far from the low, mean follies of the great,
Free from the vulgar's envious hate,
And careless of their praise.

Bless'd with a faithful female friend,
Thus let my time slide on :
But when my ev'ning sun shall downward tend,
And fleeting life is at an end,
I'll quietly be gone.

Just so some tender blossom that has flood
In the recesses of some secret wood,
Unruffled by the winds, feels slow decay,
Hangs down its head and gently dies away.

D E A T H and t h e D O C T O R.

WHEN Arns'nic lay ill, and 'twas thought he was dying,

His friends and relations around him were crying,
And made with their 'plaints such a horrible din,
That death, who was passing and heard it, went in.

What the deuce ! said the dæmon, good folk is the matter,
That ye make round the Doctor so-dev'lish a clatter ?
Suppose he were going, what boots your repining ?
But leave off however, your 'wailing and whining,
And fear not my presence, altho' I look grim,
For I know my own int'rest too well to kill him.

A SHORT DESCRIPTION of the PEOPLE called HOTTENTOTS, who live upon the Cape of Good Hope; with a Representation of a Male Inhabitant in his proper Dreſs.

THESE people are termed Hottentots from a frequent repetition of that, or such like word; and are justly reckoned the most nasty and brutish of all reasonable creatures, having nothing, save the shape of a man, that can lay claim to that noble character. They live without any sign of religion, being destitute of both priest and temple; and never shew any token of devotion, except we reckon their dancing at the full and new moon for such. Their bodies are usually besmeared with common grease, or some worse stinking stuff, which occasions a very loathsome smell: their ordinary habit is a sheep's skin, just as it is pulled off from the carcase; and they use, as ornaments, the guts, "cum puris naturalibus," wrapped about their legs and arms two or three inches deep, on which they frequently feed, when scarce of better provisions.---Notwithstanding the unparallel'd nastiness of these people, yet some travellers talk of a certain inland Canibal nation, termed Cononas, who make frequent incursions into their neighbouring countries, and spare none they can catch; no, not even the swinish Hottentots themselves, who, one would think, should make but a very nauseous and unfavoury dinner!

A N E C D O T E S.

A YOUNG prince being on a party of hunting, and finding himself cold, said to his preceptor, give me my mantle. The gentleman having heard him, answered in this manner; My Lord, your highness ought to know, that great princes, speaking of their person, always express themselves in the plural; therefore you should have said, give Us our mantle. The prince did not fail afterwards to observe that lesson exactly, and said one day to his preceptor, Our teeth ach; who, with a smile told him, Mine, I am sure don't ach in the least, my Lord. Then, replied the prince, a little chagrined at these words, I plainly see that the mantle must be Ours, but the tooth-ach Mine alone.

SIR John Powell Prince of Newton, Montgomeryshire, is in many respects, a very worthy man; hospitable, benevolent, and generous. In his person he is remarkably comely, and has a very majestic appearance. Being a gentleman of a very ancient family, and an easy fortune, he found no difficulty to recommend himself to the ladies, especially as he preferred personal and mental accomplishments to any pecuniary recommendations. He married several wives, all beautiful in their persons, and agreeable in their conversation. But, whimsical as it may appear, it is well authenticated in the neighbourhood of Newton, that he never buried one wife till the day of his marriage with another, it being a maxim with him, that it was impossible to live without a consort, dead or alive; accordingly when his wife died, he had her embalmed, a superb coffin made for her, and placed by his bed side till his ensuing nuptials took place; in the mean while a handsome monument was preparing for her in the parish church, and the day of his succeeding marriage was the day of her funeral. By this method he never was a widower; and as he cherished his wives to his bosom, even after their death, so did he prove the kindest and best of husbands during their life-time.

Gustavus Adolphus, after raising the siege of Mew, entered the town in the evening, extolling the fidelity of the inhabitants, and bravery of the garrison, to the highest degree, and allowing no man's good services to pass unrewarded. In the hurry and confusion of this conflict, Gustavus fell twice into the enemy's hands. How he escaped the first time cannot well be ascertained: he was extricated a second time by the admirable presence of mind of a Swedish horseman, who (to conceal his Majesty's rank) cried out to the Poles, "Have a care of yourselves, for we will rescue our brother."---The king had three or four companions at his elbow---This task he performed in an instant. Not long afterwards Gustavus perceived his deliverer made prisoner, and putting himself at the head of five or six cavaliers, brought him off triumphantly.---"Now, said he, brother soldier, we are upon equal terms: the obligation is become reciprocal."

The MANNER in which different NATIONS begin the DAY.

THE natural day is computed from the rising to the setting of the sun. This manner of reckoning is only used in civil cases.

The artificial day amongst the Europeans, is reckoned from midnight to midnight.

The Italians, Jews, and Chinese, begin the day after sunset. The modern Greeks are the only people who reckon the beginning of the day at the rising of the sun.

Astronomers chuse to begin the day at noon, because the sun is more exactly observed in its meridian.

The solar year, or the time which the track of the sun takes through the twelve signs of the Zodiac, consists of 365 days, 5 hours, 48 minutes, 48 seconds.

The solar months, or the time during which the sun passes from one sign to another, are not equal, because it remains longer in the septentrional, than in the meridional sign; but according to its regular course, a solar month consists of 30 days, 10 hours, 24 minutes, 4 seconds.

The lunar year has 354 days, 8 hours, 48 minutes, 36 seconds.

A lunar month, or the interval from one new moon to the other, has 29 days, 12 hours, 44 minutes, 3 seconds.

The common year has 365 days. All moveable feasts are regulated by the full moon of Easter.

It is not yet decided whether our year is longer than it was some centuries ago. The celebrated Euler having compared the modern observations with those of Walther de Nuremberg in the sixteenth century, has found that ever since that time, the sun, or rather the earth, has considerably accelerated its motion, which consequently makes the year shorter. This acceleration of motion may proceed from the resistance of the ether, which the earth meets in its way; and, according to that hypothesis, must continually diminish its orbit. If this observation of Mr. Euler be afterwards confirmed, the consequence will be, that the orbit of the earth becoming always narrower, will at last fill the place of Venus, afterwards of Mercury, and then in that proximity, not being able to support the heat of the sun, it will be consumed by fire, if the earth at that distance is rather attracted than repulsed.

A remarkable Instance of SELF GOVERNMENT.

WHEN the great Scipio, the Roman General, was pursuing his conquests in Spain, a noble and beautiful Lady was made his captive. He was in the prime of life, and had a relish for pleasure, and might have used his slave as he pleased. He was smitten with her beauty, and acquainted her with it; but she received him with horror, declared she was pre-engaged to one of her own country, and even produced her lover, to plead with his potent rival. Scipio heard them with uneasiness, appeared irresolute, but said he would declare his mind at another interview. The time came, the General took his seat, the guards attended, and the Lady and her lover threw themselves at his feet all in tears, under the greatest apprehensions and perplexity. The soldiers themselves were moved with pity. Then Scipio rising from his seat, lifted the lovers from the ground, joined their hands, dried their tears, and made them happy for ever in each other. This was a greater action, than winning a battle: No man was great enough to conquer Scipio, but Scipio conquered himself.

The ADVANTAGES of INDUSTRY.

NO man can be happy in idleness: He that should be condemned to lie torpid and motionless, “ would fly for recreation, (says South) to the mines and the gallies ;” and it is well, when nature or fortune find employment for those, who would not have known how to procure it for themselves.

He whose mind is engaged by the acquisition or improvement of a fortune, not only escapes the insipidity of indifference, and the tediousness of inactivity, but gains enjoyments wholly unknown to those, who live lazily on the toil of others ; for life affords no higher pleasure, than that of surmounting difficulties, passing from one step of success to another, forming new wishes, and seeing them gratified. He that labours in any great or laudable undertaking, has his fatigues first supported by hope, and afterwards rewarded by joy ; he is always moving towards a certain end, and when he has attained it, an end more distant invites him to a new pursuit ; for to strive with difficulties, and to conquer them, is the highest human felicity ; the next is to strive, and deserve to conquer.

A HINT to LADIES concerning the Education of Children.

LADIES, some of them of the first quality, heretofore, have been so far from thinking it any abasement, to charge themselves with the instruction of their own children, that, to their immortal honour, they have made it part of their business to assist in that of other people's, particularly those who were likely to be of consequence to the commonwealth. I instance only the famous Cornelia, the mother of the Gracchi, and Aurelia, the mother of Augustus, who did this for the noblemen of Rome, to whom they had no relation, but that of their common country. These high examples should prevail with the Ladies of our age, (who call themselves Christians) to employ some of their vacant hours, and pains, if not on others, at least on their own offspring. The very best way to make your children love and respect you when you are old, is to teach them absolute obedience when they are young, that being the first virtue a child is capable of. Certainly nothing sinks deeper or takes faster root in the mind of man, than those rules and precepts learned when a child. Solon made a law, that those parents should neither be relieved nor regarded in their old age by their children, who took no care, by a good and virtuous education in their youth, to instruct them in all the principles of their duty. Socrates says, He that makes his son worthy of esteem, by giving him a liberal education, has a far better title to his obedience and duty, than he that gives him a large estate without it.

MEMOIRS of DIOCLESIAN, who being a common SOLDIER, was elected EMPEROR in the Year 284.

THIS Emperor was born in Dalmatia, about the 245th year of Jesus Christ. He was originally a common soldier, and owed his elevation to his own merit. He possessed many great talents and abilities: he had great perseverance in the pursuit, and was active in the execution of his plans. For twenty years he found means to make his orders respectably obeyed by those haughty legions, who raised and dethroned Emperors with equal facility. He was not ignorant that a sovereign should always act with coolness, and dispassionately, and he curbed his natural disposition, which was proud, violent, and choleric. He was the architect of his own fortune. He was never rigid in the execution of justice, without consulting his ministers. He is said to have been the first Emperor who introduced the custom of kissing feet. This is a ridiculous vanity, which can be excused only on account of the lowliness of his extraction.

Dioclesian was elected Emperor in the year 284 of the Christian æra: this year is remarkable for the elevation of Dioclesian to the throne, when the æra of the martyrs also commenced. The persecution against the Christians did not begin, however, till the eighteenth year of Dioclesian's reign; nor did he yield to it but through the strong solicitations of one of his ministers, a cruel, ferocious, vindictive man: but this persecution served only to increase the number of the disciples of Jesus Christ. The blood of martyrs is always a seed that produces new proselytes.

Dioclesian, in order to guard against the continual treachery of the soldiers, took for a colleague in the government of the empire, Maximian Herculus, a soldier of fortune like himself. The end of his reign was rendered odious by the cruelty of his ministers, and he was compelled to abdicate his empire. Dioclesian retired into Dalmatia, where he enjoyed the sweets of a retired life, unknown upon a throne. Some years after, many of his friends solicited him to come forth from his obscurity, and take upon him again the government of the empire, when he made them this remarkable answer: "If you knew the pleasure I have in cultivating with my own hands the fruits and vegetables of my garden, you would never think of an empire."

This Prince calling to mind in his retirement, the faults he had been induced to commit during a reign of twenty years, often said to his friends in the anguish of his heart, "Nothing is more difficult than to govern well. Four or five courtiers league together to deceive their Sovereign. The Prince shut up in his palace, cannot reach the truth himself: He knows nothing but what he is told. In fine, notwithstanding the most upright intentions, notwithstanding all possible precautions, the best of Princes is the sport and victim of those who hide the truth from him; he is betrayed and sold: "bonus, cautus, optimus vindictus imperator."

APPROVED REMEDIES.

For the CHOLIC.

TAKE half a drachm of powder of Rhubarb toasted a little before the fire.

For DEAFNESS.

SYRINGE the ears well with some warm milk and oil, then take a quarter of an ounce of liquid Opodeldoch, and as much oil of Almonds, mix them well, and drop a few drops into each ear, stopping them with a little cotton or wool; repeat this every night going to rest.

To CURE CORNS.

ROAST a clove of garlic in hot ashes, and when you are going to bed, fasten it on the corn with a piece of cloth for five or six days, and it will entirely remove the core of the corn. Afterwards wash the foot with warm water, and in a little time the indurated skin that forms the horny tunic of the corn will disappear, and leave the part as smooth as though there had been no corn at all.

For WARTS.

TAKE the inside of a red onion, or of a pippin, and rub the warts with it, or rub them with the juice of fullendine, and in a few days they will disappear.

PIMPLES in the FACE.

BOIL together an handful of the herbs patience and pimpernel in water; and wash yourself every day with the decoction.

To destroy BUGS and FLEAS.

SMOAK your rooms with burnt thyme, or pennyroyal: Or put tanfy leaves about different parts of your beds, either under the matras or between the clothes.

For the GRAVEL and STONE.

TAKE one pound of calcined oyster shells, and pour thereon twelve pints of boiling water, strain it when cold, and take half a pint mixed with a little new milk three times in a day, gradually increasing the quantity, till it amounts to four pints a day. If the patient is costive, two ounces of Manna dissolved in a quart of whey, should be taken for one dose, once or twice every week.

For GRIPES.

TAKE half a drachm of powdered Rhubarb, and toast it a little before the fire, then add a little of powder of Ginger to it, and mix it for a dose, to be repeated as occasion requires.
